Dear Randy:

The purpose of this letter is to express to you the appreciation that we at the First Baptist Church of Windermere have for you and Aagaard-Juergensen for the work you are presently performing for us.

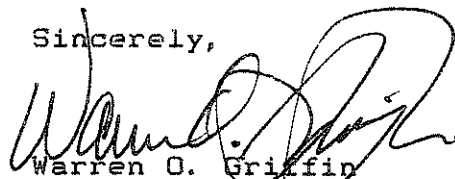

As you are well aware by this time, we did not present you with an easy task. However, your system of project management has been very complementary to our specific needs. The problems we encountered in funding the project did not seem to faze you or your company. Your willingness to start with a small contract and add to it has resulted in our being able to finally bring the entire project under contract. You have fairly represented the church to the subcontractors during this process and I am confident that you have bought out the job with fair prices for all.

It is amazing that during all of the above, you have kept the project on schedule and within budget. The quality of construction is excellent.

Your diligence and cooperative attitude have made this an enjoyable project. During my 27 years in the architectural, engineering and construction business, I have never experienced any better working relationship between the general contractor and the owner.

We look forward to the completion of our project in June and are confident that the remainder of the job will go as smoothly as the first part. We believe these facilities will enhance our ability to serve the Lord in this community and you and Aagaard-Juergensen will always be a part of that work.

Sincerely,

Warren O. Griffin
